FEATURES

8 THE WIND IN THE WILLOWS

The making of this new stop-action animated feature and 52-episode series was a Herculean labor of love. The result is a work of beauty and charm that firmly places novelist Kenneth Grahame's characters in the animation hall of fame.

10 CAPTAIN EO: DISNEY'S ULTIMATE FANTASY ATTRACTION

George Lucas, creator of "Star Wars," director Francis Ford Coppola, and pop star Michael Jackson joined forces to create "Captain EO," the 3-D sci-fi fantasy film attraction that debuts this spring in the Magic Kingdoms of Walt Disney World and Disneyland.

12 "TEX'S" MEG TILLY HAS AN "OFF BEAT" CAREER

When an injury ended her ballet career, Meg Tilly turned to acting and made her debut in "Tex." She's now in the front rank of Hollywood actresses with critically acclaimed performances in "The Big Chill" and "Agnes of God." Tilly also stars in the upcoming feature "Off Beat."

ON THE COVER

COX CABLE SWEEPSTAKES WINNERS!

We had the great joy of being one of three second-place winners of your recent "Magic Kingdom"/Trivia Answers Sweepstakes held with Cox Cable Company. We won an RCA television, a VCR and five Disney videotapes. That was a real "dream come true" for us, and we want to thank you very much.

We have enjoyed The Disney Channel since first subscribing to it in December of 1983. We watch it regularly and think it's the best programming on television today. We are also thoroughly enjoying our new TV, VCR and tapes. We had been wanting to buy a VCR for a long time, and our TV was 14 years old.

Porterville, CA

MR. TOAD FAN!

My favorite Disney short subject is "The Adventures of Mr. Toad," adapted from chapters in Kenneth Grahame's "The Wind in the Willows." I have even named my house "Toad Hall" and have a sign over the doorway on which I have painted a picture of Mr. Toad and the words "Toad Hall." I have been looking in video stores for a copy of the cartoon and have yet to find it. Would you please let me know if it is available on VCR tape?

Carol A. Gamache
Somerville, MA

Disney's original animated short subject "The Wind in the Willows" is currently available on videotape. It can also be seen in its entirety this fall when The Disney Channel presents "The Adventures of Ichabod and Mr. Toad." We're sure you're also going to enjoy the madcap adventures of Toad (and Rat, Mole, and Badger) in a brand new feature film plus 52-week series (starting in April) on The Disney Channel that uses a special technical process called stop-motion animation. (Turn to page 8 for our cover story on "The Wind and the Willows.")

PETER RABBIT AND TALES OF BEATRIX POTTER

The stunning performance by The London Royal Ballet of "Tales of Beatrix Potter" left my family reeling. The charm and beauty of each character coupled with the magnificent scenery produced dazzling enchantment.

Our congratulations and heartfelt thanks to The Disney Channel and Memphis

Cablevision for airing this magical production.

LOVE LEADS THE WAY

I was so impressed and moved by the heartwarming movie "Love Leads the Way." As a small child I had a blind aunt. She didn't have a dog, and she was forced to stay indoors most of the time. I think what animals and people can accomplish together is just great.

I hope to see many more films that move people as this one has. Handicapped people don't want to be handicapped. They want to lead full lives like everyone else. You did a great job with "Love Leads the Way."

Thank you. We're also sure you'll enjoy "The Mind's Eye: The Experience of Learning" this month on The Disney Channel. It focuses on the eye-brain connection and how human beings process visual information. When this connection goes awry, perceptual learning disabilities like dyslexia are the result. The program also examines recent research into learning disabilities and the educational techniques being used to overcome them.

MORE HAYLEY MILLS

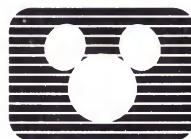

I've really enjoyed all the movies you've shown that starred Hayley Mills. I've seen "Pollyanna," "The Moon-Spinners," "Summer Magic," and "The Parent Trap." Please play more of these sensational Hayley Mills movies.

Rachel Lindvall
Richfield, MN

"The Parent Trap II," made exclusively for The Disney Channel, is in post production and is slated to premiere this summer, as part of The Hayley Mills Film Festival. "The Parent Trap II" is Hayley's first screen role with The Walt Disney Company in 20 years. In her heyday, Hayley was receiving over 7,500 pieces of fan mail a week.

ANNOUNCING

by Carol Lawson

The first doll in an enchanting new suite of fairy tale dolls by this renowned British artist.

Crafted in fine porcelain.

Individually hand-painted. $60.

Please mail by March 31, 1986.

Once upon a time there was a little girl who lived in a wonderful world of make-believe. The little girl grew up to become an artist of renown, re-creating that fairy-tale world again and again in some of her finest work.

Now Carol Lawson, for that is the little girl's name, has created her very first costume doll: Goldilocks. Inaugurating a suite of dolls that portrays the most delightful heroines from the world's best-loved fairy tales.

Carol Lawson's Goldilocks is thoroughly enchanting. She has been handcrafted with all the charm and care of the fine collector dolls of yesteryear. Her bisque porcelain head, hands and feet have been sculptured in meticulous detail, and her lovely face painted by hand.

Goldilocks' costume has been designed just for her. With all the special little touches one would expect from a Carol Lawson creation. Notice, the blue satin bow perched atop her golden curls . . . her ruffled pink-and-white polka dot dress accented with tiny satin rosebuds. Even her own pet teddy bear.

The result is a completely entrancing new collector doll that combines the finest craftsmanship with the very special magic of a Carol Lawson original.

Goldilocks is available exclusively from Franklin Heirloom Dolls, and only by direct application. The price for this delightful Carol Lawson doll is just $60—which may be paid in convenient monthly installments.

Each imported doll will bear the distinguishing mark of Franklin Heirloom Dolls and will be individually crafted under their close supervision. Each will be accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity bearing Carol Lawson's signature, together with a specially written commentary about the fairy tale that inspired this lovely work. In addition, a stand will be provided on which to display the doll at no additional charge.

To acquire Goldilocks, no advance payment is required now. However, the accompanying application should be returned by March 31st.

Doll shown much smaller than actual size of approximately 12" in height.

Disney BEAT

Twenty-five years after her dual role as teen-aged twins in Walt Disney Productions' "The Parent Trap," Hayley Mills returns to play "herselves" grown up in The Disney Channel's "Parent Trap II." This time it's the adult look-alike twins who get entangled in a matchmaking scheme woven by one of their daughters. The comedy, directed by Ron Maxwell and produced for the Channel by The Landsburg Company, is scheduled to air this summer.

The Living Seas, a spectacular marine adventure, is the newest Future World attraction at EPCOT Center in Walt Disney World. It is the largest facility ever dedicated to exploring man's relationship with the ocean. The pavilion contains a coral reef that measures 200 feet in diameter and is 27 feet deep. The Living Seas tank contains 5.6 million gallons of sea water, and is stocked with numerous species of marine creatures. Collectively, the marine specimens in the pavilion consume 500-700 pounds of food per day. Guests move through this undersea world after viewing a seven-minute film focusing on the ecology that links the survival of human life to the ocean.

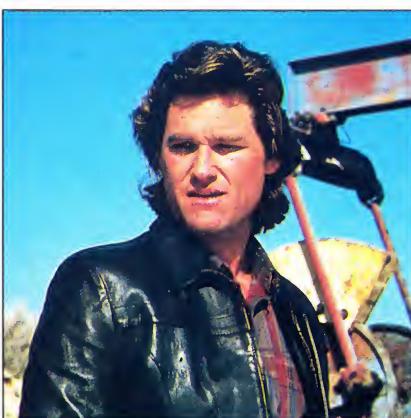

Jon Voight, who appears on The Disney Channel this month (see page 15) as the down, out, and punchy pugilist in "The Champ," has garnered critical acclaim with his latest Oscar-caliber performance in "Runaway Train." Voight plays a prison inmate who, along with his fellow prisoner Eric Roberts, manages a daring breakout. The two hitch a ride on a train — only to discover that the engineer has died of a heart attack—and the throttle's stuck wide open. Critics have hailed the film as an icy existential drama—and not just because of the picture's frozen setting in snowy Alaska. Voight's character is hardly sympathetic, but the gritty realism of his performance has consolidated his reputation as an actor who disdains "pretty boy" leading roles. Voight's next movie is the upcoming "Desert Bloom."

Kurt Russell graduates from juvenile roles to super stardom in action pictures

Ladies and Gentlemen! Next month, direct from Paris, join host Ben Vereen for the worldwide television premiere of the ninth annual Festival Mondial de Cirque de Demain —The International Circus Stars of Tomorrow! This exclusive, made-for-The Disney Channel special features the finest performers between the ages of five and twenty-five to be found under the big top!

The Disney Channel will follow the two young Americans competing in the Festival Mondial de Cirque de Demain Nikolaus Winn, scion of a famous circus family, who began walking the wire at age two. And for the ultimate, death-defying feats of that daring young man on the flying trapeze, there's Mark David, a twenty-year-old aerialist who performs the famous drop on the trapeze, holding onto the slim bar by only the back of his heels, suspended thirty feet above the circus ring—and with no safety net! And, as an added attraction, you'll meet both of these amazing young men up close and personal in The Disney Channel Magazine next month.

Kurt Russell, appearing on The Disney Channel this month in "The Spy Busters" (see page 16), made nine Disney films as a child actor before going on to carve out a niche as a leading man. Last month Russell got the opportunity to turn back the clock, so to speak, with his co-starring role in the film "The Best of Times," which features the zany comic Robin Williams as the man who reunites his high school football team to correct the blunder he made years earlier in the team's big game. As for Russell, a self-acknowledged aficionado of action films, he rejoined director John Carpenter (the two teamed up for "The Thing" and "Escape from New York") for "Big Trouble in Little China" (set for release in the late spring or early summer). This one has it all: it's an action-adventure mystery which combines kung-fu, the Chinese art of self-defense, with a ghost story — specifically the spirits who inhabit the streets beneath Chinatown.

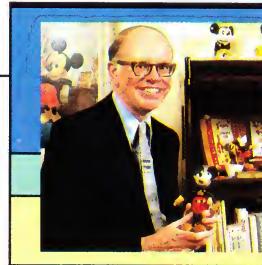

Anguilla

These Walt Disney stamps and souvenir sheet from Anguilla were first issued on February 20, 1984.

Anguilla, which is located in the West Indies, was first inhabited by Cuban Indians. The island became a colony of Great Britain in 1650, and in 1882 Great Britain made Anguilla, St Christopher, and Nevis a single colony. Anguilla's status was officially changed to a separate dependency of Great Britain in 1980.

Dave Smith

EXPLORING • THE

ARCHIVES

Dave Smith, archivist for The Walt Disney Company, answers questions and provides information about the studio's history and its productions.

Is it true that Walt Disney was once an actor?—L.M., Renton, WA

I probably wouldn't dignify it by calling it "acting," but when Walt Disney was a boy in Kansas City, he and a friend named Walt Pfeiffer would occasionally put on skits at the local vaudeville theater. The boys called themselves "The Two Walts," and one time they were delighted to win a prize of 25¢. The stage always fascinated Walt Disney, and if he hadn't gotten into animation, he just might have tried to make acting a career. He enjoyed doing the lead-ins for his television shows. If you want to see how good an actor Walt Disney was, catch him this month in "I Captured the King of the Leprechauns" (see page 13).

Could you settle an argument? My husband says that after the success of "Davy Crockett," Disney starred Fess Parker in a "Daniel Boone" series. I disagree. Wasn't it Dewey Martin?—P.G.H., New Orleans, LA

It is easy to see the source of your confusion. Disney followed "Davy Crockett" with a four-part mini-series on "Daniel Boone," starring Dewey Martin during the 1960-61 TV season and which airs this month on "Disney's Legends & Heroes." Fess Parker, however, starred in the popular non-Disney "Daniel Boone" series from 1964 to 1970 on NBC.

Dewey Martin as Daniel Boone in Walt Disney's four-part teleseries

I have a photograph signed by Walt Disney. Is it valuable?

—R.B., Dallas, TX

Signatures of Walt Disney bring several hundred dollars. However, one has to be careful about Disney autographs because, since he was such a busy man, he occasionally would authorize some of his artists to sign his name for him. If you would like to send me a copy of your Disney signature, I can examine it for you. By the way, even though it has been written that Walt Disney couldn't sign his name like the famous logo you see on Disney products, that logo was drawn by graphic artists who based it on Walt's actual signature.

Did I recognize the director of the Blind Institute in "Love Leads the Way" as the star of an old Republic Studios serial in the 1950s?

—S.K., Yuma, AZ

Yes, that was George D. Wallace who starred in the "Commando Cody, Sky Marshal of the Universe" serial.

Disney Channel Trivia

- With the premiere of the colorized version of "The Absent-Minded Professor" on the Channel this month, can you identify some of the other Disney theatrical films that were made in black-and-white?*

- In case you're curious, Time magazine published this recipe for creating flubber:

"To one pound of salt water taffy add one heaping tablespoon polyurethane foam, one cake crumbled yeast. Mix till smooth, allow to rise. Then pour into saucepan over one cup cracked rice mixed with one cup water. Add topping of molasses. Boil until it lifts the lid and says 'Qurlp.'"

- "The Spy-Busters" starring Kurt Russell (see page 16) originally appeared on the Disney television series as a three-parter entitled "The Secret of Boyne Castle," and later as a theatrical feature in Europe entitled "Guns in the Heather."

Darby O'Gill uses the magic of music to excite dance-mad Leprechauns

- An entire new sound stage had to be built at the Disney Studio for "Darby O'Gill and the Little People" (see page 13) in order to handle the enormous technical problems of filming the scene in the Leprechauns' throne room.

Readers who have Disney-related questions can write to Dave Smith, c/o The Disney Channel Magazine, 4111 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, CA 91505.

*Features—"The Reluctant Dragon" (partial), "The Shaggy Dog," "The Sign of Zorro," "Son of Flubber," plus 74 Mickey Mouse cartoons, 28 Silly Symphonies, and the featurette "The Emperor Penguins" (not to mention dozens of silent cartoons prior to the creation of Mickey Mouse).

The Wind in

An International Emmy Award-winning feature and 52-part Badger may at last find a place among animation's

Toad is a pompous, boastful, wealthy trendsetter. One of the most interesting characters in children's literature, Toad, the leading figure in Kenneth Grahame's 1908 classic "The Wind in the Willows," has nonetheless never reached the heights of superstardom.

Maybe he is too flamboyant, too eccentric, too wild, as the newly renovated Disneyland attraction, "Mr. Toad's Wild Ride," amply demonstrates. His car takes passengers careening right through the library fireplace, which appears to contain a roaring fire, and on into a series of narrowly averted disasters. The ride makes Toad's misadventures crazier than ever—worthy of his wildest imaginings.

Now The Disney Channel is launching a musical, stop-frame animated "Wind in the Willows," which brilliantly showcases Toad and his friends Rat, Mole, and Badger, and may give them a place in the tradition of fine animation. The U.S. premiere of the magnificent 90-minute feature airing on Sunday, March 9, will be followed by a series of 52 half-hour episodes, based on stories of these lovable Grahame characters. The splendid series, beginning in April, will feature a new episode each week on Sundays at 10:00 a.m., EST.

The model animation used is of such advanced design that the series' producers refer to the animals' "acting performances." And viewers would never guess that each model is less than 12 inches tall. Filming in stop-frame animation means that action is shot one frame at a time, using a special stop-action movie camera, with the models moved a fraction of an inch in between. On a good day the animators working two or three characters can get 25 seconds of action on film. On a bad day, it's closer to seven. A battle scene with 30 weasels is more like filming "Lawrence of Arabia."

The series offers more than Toad's crazy adventures. Grahame's animals, living in the style of Edwardian gentlemen, give a picture of leisurely living in the English countryside before World War I. It was a time when motor cars were unusual and frightening to many people (but not to Toad), airplanes even more unheard of (except to Toad), and upper-class living gracious, whether it be in a mansion like Toad Hall or more modest dwellings such as Rat's river bank or Mole's underground cottage. Theirs was a quiet life of comfort and manners.

"The film was made with the perfectionism of a miniature 'Brideshead Revisited,'" one British critic commented after watching "The Wind in the Willows" on British television. House exteriors and interiors were designed and furnished exactly as they would have been in 1908. Teacups, books, ascots, shoes, and striped blazers—each measuring an inch or so—were designed and hand made with as much care as costumes for a blockbuster live-action movie. Indeed, the British-based Cosgrove Hall Productions Ltd., which made the feature and the series, found no object too small to labor over, even if it appears on screen for only a second.

Costumes, authentic to the times in every detail, were the responsibility of a former fashion designer. He dyed and printed the fabrics, knitted small sweaters, and made tiny elegant shoes and slippers.

Throughout the series Toad enthusiastically takes up various hobbies, such as skiing and photography (only to drop them as the novelty wears off). For those momentary adven-

the Willows

series of such beauty and charm that Toad, Rat, Mole, and most memorable characters. By Gretchen Haight

the production represents

Toad as lovable despite his annoyances, rather than simply unlikable, which would have been easier to depict.

But how can a rubber toad have so much character? Well, here's a true-life, off-the-screen description of how he works.

The pretentious Toad—voguish tastemaker extraordinaire—stands only eight inches tall, and like the other characters, he's made of latex foam that has been baked to just the point of doneness for "a good acting performance." His exterior is then tures, all of the hobby equipment is exactly as it would have been in that period. A camera, only two inches big, actually works. Toad takes terrible pictures, but it's no fault of the camera. Badger's pictures come out fine.

Although Toad and his friends are amusingly Edwardian in style, underneath their ultracivilized exteriors, they're altogether human in emotion. Furthermore, they have complex personalities (at least for animated characters); they're not all good or all bad. Brian Cosgrove and Mark Hall, the series' producers (Hall is the director, too), think that one of their greatest accomplishments is that carefully painted to look like the toad that he is. Inside Toad's rubberized body, however, is a metal skeleton with as many joints as a human being, which enables him to behave just as foolishly as many a person.

For Toad and the other characters, though, much of their acting ability is in their heads. Each model has a fiberglass skull only a few inches in diameter, yet the eyes can blink and the nose can twitch. The eyes, unusually expressive for animated characters, are operated simply by the animators touching them with a gentle finger or a pin. Unlike puppets whose trap-door mouths move out of sync with the script, these small animals deliver lines with the precision of the British actors whose voices they've borrowed.

Stop-frame animation is a slow process, demanding patience and care in order to get real-life expression from the animals, but the results are spectacular. On film the animals move as though they have minds of their own, and they converse and sing songs with voices that seem to come from within.

In addition to excellent production results, Cosgrove and Hall laughingly admit to the advantages of working with their small rubber models: "They're easier to work with than real actors. If they cause trouble, you can just put them back in their box and go home."

"With 'The Wind in the Willows,' Brian Cosgrove and Mark Hall have finally joined the big league of animators," says a British newspaper article, which continues: "Not surprisingly they are both great admirers of Walt Disney."

"Like Disney, our first aim is to be good storytellers and entertainers," says Brian Cosgrove. Indeed, Cosgrove Hall's animated "Wind in the Willows" is funny and entertaining, and poignantly human, too. It's also charming in its slow, watery pace and its English flavor.

Those who've read "The Wind in the Willows" will be delighted with the brilliant animation that gives Toad, Rat, Mole and Badger life on the screen. Those who haven't yet met them, have a grand treat in store. And with the upcoming series stretching out into the future to include 52 episodes, all viewers can look forward with pleasure to these endearing characters becoming part of their lives. ♦

CAPTAIN EO

Michael Jackson Is a Magical—and Musical—Spaceman in Disney's Ultimate Sci-Fi Fantasy Attraction

There has never been a cinematic experience quite like this: galaxies of stars shimmer around you and angry laser beams cut through the air inches above your head as starships twist and twirl in breathtaking chases. The darkness suddenly explodes with images of light as Michael Jackson, America's king of pop stars, leads his crew of interstellar adventurers through spectacular musical production numbers set to his latest songs.

The experience is "Captain EO," a labor of love that brought together the greatest names in American entertainment. This may be the premiere movie event of 1986, but it won't be coming to a theater near you. "Captain EO" remains in the special domain of Disney's Magic Kingdoms. It debuts this spring at the new, specially constructed Magic Eye Theater in Tomorrowland at Disneyland and at "Journey into Imagination" in Walt Disney World's EPCOT Center in Florida.

What sets "Captain EO" apart from other space—or musical—productions? The short film grew out of a brainstorming session between Walt Disney Company Chairman Michael Eisner and filmmaker George Lucas, whose "Star Wars" sagas blazed a permanent mark in the history of American film. Lucas agreed to create an attraction for the theme parks if a performer as talented as Michael Jackson would be involved. Jackson, a long-time Disney fan (he frequently visits Disneyland), indicated interest in doing a project with Disney, but only provided Lucas could be involved.

To direct the space fantasy, Lucas called on the highest directorial talent in Hollywood, Francis Ford Coppola, creator of the brilliant "Godfather" films, "Apocalypse Now," and "The Cotton Club."

There was one further refinement—a technical one—to be added to this stellar entertainment effort: 3-D. But unlike the difficult-to-see 3-D films of the past, which required viewers to wear unwieldy and uncomfortable glasses, "Captain EO" was filmed with twin 70mm cameras on film specially developed by Kodak and WED, Disney's development and "Imaginering" arm. While the audience will still have to don 3-D glasses, the goggles have been designed to afford the maximum in viewer comfort.

Harrison Ellenshaw, who supervised the visual effects for "Captain EO," explains the superiority of the Disney approach over attempts by conventional theaters to project 3-D images.

"You're projecting on a screen (in a 'regular' theater) that was never meant to have 3-D images put on it. Here we have the advantage of having customized theaters built and equipped especially for 3-D, so you get a nice, bright image, you get twin 70mm projections, which is almost unheard of. The quality should be exceedingly good."

Adds George Lucas, whose official title was Executive Producer, "Ships will come right out over the audience while lasers shoot by their heads. There's drama mixed with song."

Indeed, unlike the "Magic Journeys" 3-D film presentation shown previously at the parks, "Captain EO" is "a new three-dimensional, narrative musical film presentation." It is, in short, a self-contained mini-movie focusing on the adventures of the charismatic interstellar spaceman "Captain EO"—Michael Jackson, whose acting, singing, dancing and songs add a new luster to his already bright career.

"Captain EO"—it is a rare and revolutionary film event, an event created by an awesome assortment of talent drawn together through the magic of Disney. Not only is this cinematic gem the creation of the finest minds in show business, but it reaffirms The Walt Disney Company's dedication to being on the cutting edge of motion picture technology—and family entertainment.

Something new and exciting is happening to The Disney Channel!

Watch for it.

Starting in April, The Disney Channel has some big surprises for you.

The Disney Channel has much more programming.

The Disney Channel will bring you more quality motion pictures for people of all ages than ever before. (Almost twice as many different films each month.)

The Disney Channel is more convenient than ever.

Now you will be able to enjoy different episodes of our popular series, "Danger Bay" and "The Edison Twins" at the same time each week. Children can watch our exciting series, "The Wind in the Willows," at a regular time every weekend also.

The Disney Channel Magazine is new and improved.

The new Disney Channel Magazine will have 25% more pages, filled with more program highlights, behind-the-scenes stories, interviews with your favorite personalities, letters to the editor, previews of things to come and much more. All in a new, redesigned, every-six-week magazine. It will be more fun to enjoy and easier to use, with more informative program listings and highlights. And there's a new pull-out, eight page children's activity center, "Just for Kids."

Coming later this spring...

Even more new feature films, miniseries, specials and series:

- Disney's Return to Treasure Island 10-hour Miniseries
- The Care Bears Movie
- Parent Trap II, starring Hayley Mills--made exclusively for The Disney Channel, PLUS a Hayley Mills Film Festival
- An exclusive Bob Hope Movie Series
- Return to Oz
- PLUS, a lot more great surprises.

You are very special to us.
Thanks for being a part of The Disney Channel.

Actress Meg Tilly hasn't let seven years and seven major movies change her life. She's a traditional woman who puts family values ahead of career. With her leading role in "Off Beat," a romantic comedy opening in April, and her critically acclaimed performance in "Agnes of God," Meg ranks among Hollywood's most sought after young stars. Yet she still places her husband, producer Tim Zinnemann, and their two-year-old daughter Emily at the top of her priorities.

"If I want something I go after it, and try my best to get it," Meg says. "However, when I take a job, I do so only if I'm also sure I can give it my most and be there for my family."

"I shoot a picture two or three months out of a year. The rest of the time I spend at home. I know it sounds weird, but I like getting up in the morning with Tim and making coffee and orange juice and giving the baby her bath and washing the dishes. In fact, I absolutely love it."

"I am very much a family person. I grew up with two brothers, two sisters, and many stepbrothers and -sisters. My mother worked as a teacher and we all had to take care of each other. We had lots of responsibilities."

Meg and her siblings were raised in a small town on an island off the coast of

"TEX'S" TILLY HAS OFF BEAT CAREER

British Columbia. They had no telephone or TV, and they never went to the movies. But the town did have a ballet studio, and when Meg was 14 she decided to become a dancer. Four years later she went to New York, won a scholarship to the renowned Melissa Hayden school of ballet, and saw her ambitions end abruptly with a back injury she suffered when a dance partner accidentally dropped her.

"At that point I needed something else to do," Meg says, "so I thought of acting." She went to Hollywood from New York, moved in with her sister (actress Jennifer Tilly), and got a part in a local theater play. From that came an agent, who helped her make her movie bow at age 19 as Matt Dillon's steadfast high school girlfriend in "Tex" (see page 14). She also met Tim Zinnemann, the film's producer, and they began a romance which culminated in marriage a few months later. When "Tex" hit the screens in 1982, critics singled out Meg for a praiseworthy performance. It was an entrancing debut.

Now, at 26, Meg has a number of major movies to her credit including "The Big Chill," in which she played a spacy college grad, "Agnes of God," in which she portrayed a novice nun on trial for murder, and "Off Beat," Touchstone Films' (a Walt Disney Company) comedy about off-duty cops in which she stars with Judge Reinhold.

"It is tricky, trying to balance a career and marriage," Meg admits. "Even though I try very hard to say that I am an actress and I leave my work at the office, my personality does change a bit with every part I play. If I play a shy person, I'm usually shy. If I play an aggressive person, I'm usually aggressive. This can cause problems. I play a policewoman in 'Off Beat,' and I wasn't very far into the film before my husband was complaining that I had become a little too bossy around the house.

"Most of the time, I must confess, he calls me a goody-two-shoes, and I know to some people I appear to be a bit of a Pollyanna. I don't drink, smoke, or do drugs. But I care about people and I care about my work a great deal. I'm living my life, and I'm taking responsibility for my choices, and right now I'm happy with the way I am."

DARBY O'GILL AND THE LITTLE PEOPLE

Exclusive movie starring Sean Connery, Janet Munro, Albert Sharpe, Estelle Winwood

St. Paddy himself might think Darby O'Gill's (Albert Sharpe) tales of meeting the little people are so much blarney, but the wily old gamekeeper has matched wits with the Leprechauns many a time. In fact, the wee folk's good King Brian (Jimmy O'Dea) has put the "come hither" on Darby to keep him captive for all time in their royal hall.

When Darby fiddles his way to freedom, however, he turns the tables on the little monarch with a few drams of poteen—and wrests three wishes from King Brian.

I CAPTURED THE KING OF THE LEPRECHAUNS

Exclusive special with Walt Disney, Pat O'Brien

When Darby O'Gill introduces Walt Disney and Pat O'Brien to Brian, King of the Leprechauns, Walt and Pat discover that a man best keep a steady wit and a silver tongue about him if he wants to be makin' a movie with the little people. This special is not only a look behind the scenes of "Darby O'Gill and the Little People" but a pot o' gold in honor of St. Paddy's Day, too.

Robert Newton as the blackhearted pirate Long John Silver

Treasure Island

Exclusive movie starring Bobby Driscoll, Robert Newton

Avast there matey, ye'll want to weigh anchor with Jim Hawkins (Bobby Driscoll), his grown-up friends, and that whiskery rascal Long John Silver (Robert Newton) as they sail on an epic voyage to Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island."

The action begins ashore when the dying Billy Bones gives young Jim Hawkins a map to Captain Flint's buried treasure. But before this film concludes, you'll thrill to high adventure and low treachery. You'll forever remember the moment when Long John Silver and his cutthroat crew of pirates seize Jim's ship and run up the Jolly Roger as they break into the pirate's chanty: "Fifteen men on the dead man's chest, Yo-ho-ho, and a bottle of rum!"

Made in 1950, "Treasure Island" was Walt Disney's first live action feature—and it has long been regarded as the definitive dramatization of Stevenson's great novel. As Long John Silver, the late, distinguished actor Robert Newton etches an unforgettable portrait of a salty seadog who is an equal mixture of courage, greed, and treachery.

And shiver me timbers, matey, after this you'll be anxious and eager to set sail next month when "Disney's Return to Treasure Island" premieres. Remember, young Jim and Long John didn't find all of Cap'n Flint's treasure.

Anna (Martha Byrne) finds herself enmeshed in mystery

ANNA TO THE INFINITE POWER

Exclusive movie starring Dina Merrill, Martha Byrne, Jack Gilford

Anna, a brilliant and difficult young girl, is suddenly haunted by a dream: On an airplane she is sitting next to a woman who claims to be her mother. But the woman isn't Anna's mother, and in the vision the plane crashes. The next morning Anna is stunned when she watches a TV news report about an airplane crash — and sees the very image of herself and the woman who claimed to be her mother. When young Anna learns the truth about her real identity, the suspense and terror begin to mount.

Exclusive movie starring Matt Dillon, Jim Metzler, Meg Tilly

Praised by critics as a sensitive and honest treatment of S. E. Hinton's contemporary classic, "Tex" is the tale of two teenagers coming of age without parental supervision. Matt Dillon is Tex, a rebellious, angry youth whose practical jokes always land him in trouble; Jim Metzler portrays Mace, his serious older brother who runs their motherless home while their father travels on the rodeo circuit. Emilio Estevez (co-star of "The Breakfast Club") and Meg Tilly (currently co-starring in "Agnes of God" and "Off Beat") deliver powerful performances.

Nancy Olson & Fred MacMurray fly his flubberized flivver

The Absent-Minded Professor

Exclusive movie starring Fred MacMurray, Nancy Olson

This favorite black and white Disney comedy now dazzles in color, all done through computerization.

The story is colorful itself: First, scrambled egghead Prof. Brainard (Fred MacMurray) is so preoccupied with scientific experiments that he misses his own wedding. When he accidentally invents flubber (flying rubber), he uses the antigravitational goo to make his car fly, only to have it stolen by a schemer.

Will the Prof. get his flubberized flivver back? Will wedding bells ever chime? (Don't forget! Colorized drawings of flubber by young Disney Channel viewers will be shown when the movie is aired.)

Dick Van Dyke closes in on a clutch of nasty mobsters

NEVER A DULL MOMENT

*Exclusive movie starring
Dick Van Dyke,
Edward G. Robinson,
Dorothy Provine*

A gangster spoof that's fast and funny, with visual gags galore, this Disney comedy lives up to its title. Dick Van Dyke describes it as a Mack Sennett Keystone Cops movie in reverse. "On the set we jokingly subtitled it, 'The Keystone Crooks.'"

Van Dyke plays an actor who's mistaken for a hired killer and impersonates the killer to save his life. Then the real killer arrives. Edward G. Robinson, in one of his last screen parts as a cigar-biting gang leader, parodies his own early-career roles as a big-time crime czar.

Too Many Robots

I really like The Disney Channel because there's a lot of cartoons and shows you never get bored with. My two favorite shows are "Good Morning, Mickey" and "Mousertpiece Theater." I like "Good Morning, Mickey" because it shows old cartoons. I don't like these new cartoons now because there's too many robots. And I like "Mousertpiece Theater" because it has cartoons. So thank you for The Disney Channel.

Pluto's Pen Pals Meet in the Magic Kingdom

My daughter Emily joined Pluto's Pen Pals when it first started. She was matched up with a little girl from Redmond, Washington, named Megan Shay. Emily and Megan wrote each other often and exchanged pictures. Recently I received a letter from Megan's dad saying they would be in California and could we meet them at Disneyland? What a perfect place for two Disney pals to meet!

Emily and I met Megan and her dad at the front gates of Disneyland this past November 9th. The girls met, giggled a little, and soon were hand-in-hand, skipping along. We spent the whole day and had a wonderful time. I also enjoyed meeting Megan's parents, and her mother and I now write, too!

Thanks so much for the great entertainment and the opportunities provided through The Disney Channel!

Editor's note: Keep your eyes peeled! "Pluto's Pen Pals" returns next month. For all of you out there who are eager to meet new friends through the mail, "Pluto's Pen Pals" will appear in every other issue of The Disney Channel Magazine.

"Love Leads The Way" To Searching the Book Shelves

I really loved the movie "Love Leads The Way"—every time I saw it there were tears in my eyes. After I found out the title of the book the movie was based on, I wanted to read it. I didn't want to get it from the library because I wanted my own book.

I tried just about every bookstore in my area, and could not find it. I finally decided to go to the library, and they didn't have it! They said they would check other libraries for me. In about two weeks I finally heard from the library to come and pick up the book. After I finished reading "First Lady of the Seeing Eye," I had tears in my eyes—just like I had when I watched "Love Leads The Way."

Never Cry Wolf

I recently saw the movie "Never Cry Wolf." I thought it was splendid and beautiful. I am now looking forward to seeing other feature films and specials. Although I am 16 years old I enjoy watching "Donald Duck Presents." Thank you for listening to my opinions and comments.

Donald, The Dashing Duck

I watched you in "A Disney Halloween." I think you are exciting, I think you are great! You're my favorite! You're not afraid of skeletons or witches. You're not afraid of goblins or ghosts. I think you are not afraid of anything. I hope you go down in history!

How Old Are Lilli and Roo???

I wish I could be Lilli and Roo from "Dumbo's Circus" and "Welcome to Pooh Corner." Those are the shows I like best and sometimes I pretend to be Lilli or Roo. I am always playing like I am them.

I am writing because I would like to know something. How old are Lilli and Roo, really? I am nine years old.

We don't really know how old Lilli and Roo are. We asked them, and they smiled and said they're any age you wish them to be!

ICICLES

Dangling, dangling,
As if they don't care,
Hanging from the rooftops,
Hanging from the air.
They hang on the rooftops
As if they dare,
Soon they will fall
As if they don't care.

Mr. Toad's Wild Ride

Poop! Poop! goes the horn on Mr. Toad's new motorcar! So race 'round the River and the Wild Woods with Toady! Here's what to do. Cut out the different colored cars to use for playing pieces. Begin at "Start." To move, simply flip a coin. If it's heads, you move one, tails moves you two! The first person to get to Toad Hall wins!

To get out of jail you flip twice in your turn. Double heads or tails gets you out of the dungeon!

Toady's new cars! Glue or tape onto construction paper, then cut out and fold on dotted line.

Pets AND PALS

Whether your children's best animal friend is feathered, finned or furred, mammal, fish or bird, there's nothing quite as cute as a kid with a pet pal. So send us a color print or 35mm slide for possible use in the magazine or on The Disney Channel, following "The Wonderful World of Color."

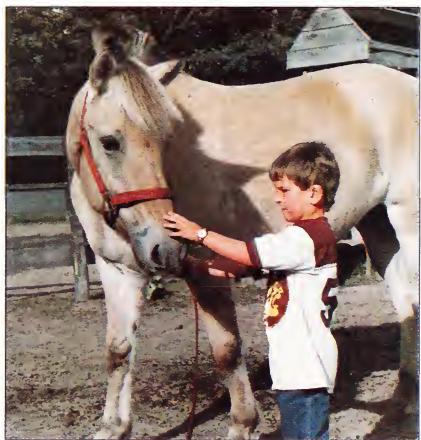

(Remember, all photographs or slides do become the property of The Disney Channel.)
